The title I am going to start with is Earthen Cycle and that may change, but it a project that is something that could invite people in and to think about the landscape and to think about the clay. I have made it out of two different kinds of clay. The kaolin mixture and that really beautiful orange red clay there and I'm going to make, and we are going to place the balls around, the spheres, and pin them down onto to the site so that they don't can't move, and then complete the ring with-- using the rammed earth walls. And they will be really low wide walls something that will be comfortable for people to sit on. And it is open so that people can go in, and as you can see... I was thinking about the idea of foliage or things that can grow there over time. Perhaps that is something that Charlie can help us with.
