

a natural state

Artist: Tim Greene

Video 1: Showcase

Greene: I certainly call myself a craftsman but, as far as being an artist, that's up to somebody else to look at my work and determine for themselves whether it's art or whether it's just fine craft. If I like a piece when I'm done, I like it. It doesn't matter what somebody else decides it is or is not. If I call it art, and somebody else comes in and says, "Oh, well, that's not art," well, then I might be disappointed if they don't call it art, but I just do what I do.

I think I leave enough of the natural state in most of them so that people can relate to it as a tree. It's not just something that's man-made, it, it, it definitely started out as a tree.

End.
